KATMANDU [Nepal], 527 miles from Calcutta, made up as follows;—

From Calcutta (Howrah) to Mokameghat, E. I. Ry., 284 miles; thence by T. S. Ry to Segowlie, 152 miles; 233 miles from Allahabad to Dighaghat, E. I. Ry., thence by B. & N.-W. and T. S. Rys. to Segowlie, 125 miles.; from Lucknow to Ajodhya Ghat, O. and R. Ry. (viâ Fyzabad); thence by B. & N.-W. and T.S. Rys., via Gorucknpore, to Segowlie, 337 miles

The Collector of Champaran is the official agent for conveyance from Segowlie to Bhimpedi, a distance of 66 miles. This portion of the journey is usually performed by palki, the bearers being paid at the rate of Rs. 2-12 per man. The road from Segowlie to Hardia Factory, 15 miles; and thence to Raksaul, 2 miles (boundary between British India and Nepal), and thence to Semrabasa, 13 miles (beginning of Terai forest), is good and suitable for driving. From Semrabasa to Bichakoh, 10 miles. The road leads through the sandy bed of a stream; the next 6 miles to the Churiaghati Pass lie up the bed of a mountain torrent, and the following 6 miles to Hetoura are through river beds and forests, and over broken ground. From Hetoura a good road follows the course of the Rapti River, by a gradual ascent to Bhimpedi, a village at the foot of the first range of mountains, which enclose Nepal, 14 miles. From Bhimpedi to Katmandu, 25 miles. The journey is performed by dandy dak, which is arranged for by the Resident in Nepal. From Bhimpedi, the first two miles to Sisagarhi Fort are up the face of a very steep hill. The next mile, by a somewhat steep ascent, brings the traveller to the top of the Sisagarhi Pass (6,550 feet); thence by a steep descent of 2 miles to Tambakhani, the valley of the Panouni is reached. For the next 4 miles to Markhoo, the road runs along the bed of the Panouni River, and then for the next 4 miles goes over very undulating ground to Chittong. From here the road ascends steeply to the top of the Chandragarhi Pass (7,525 feet) 2 miles, and descends to Thankote at the head of the Katmandu or Nepal Valley, by a broken precipitous path, 2 miles. From Thankote to Katmandu (4,750 feet) is 9 miles. There is a good driving road.

A relay of palki-bearers should be sent forward to Bichakoh, and if this be done, the time occupied from Segowlie to Bhimpedi should be under 24 hours. If the stay in Nepal is to be short, the bearers who bring the traveller from Segowlie to Bhimpedi should be ordered to await his return at Bichakoh and Bhimpedi. Goods and baggage, such as are not carried along by bearers with the palki, should be sent on ahead by country cart from Segowlie to Bhimpedi during the cold weather, and to Hetoura or Bichakoh or Semrabasa during the hot and rainy seasons; whence they will be conveyed by hill porters to Katmandu.

Except at Sisagarhi Fort, where there is a small bungalow, without furniture or servants, there are no Rest-Houses for Europeans either on the way up to or at Katmandu.

Between Segowlie and Nepal, European travellers must take with them all supplies required, also bedding and servants.

For Natives there are Rest-Houses and bunia's shops at Semrabasa, Bichakoh, Hetoura, Bhimpedi, Sisagarhi Fort, Tambakhani, Markhoo, Chittong and Thankote. Europeans are not allowed to visit Katmandu without the permission of the Resident in Nepal.
